Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2013. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.The country today known as Nigeria has a problem of identity in its (i) very existence, and (ii) worldview. There is no question that Nigeria exists as both a legal entity and a physical entity. It has defined geographical boundaries (although it occasionally gets into disputes regarding these boundaries). The country is recognised as a territorial-State by the United Nations and therefore has legal globally acknowledged Sovereign status. The problem of Nigeria therefore - it is a problem of rather than a problem with - is as simple as to ask if Nigeria the legal entity is a geo-social reality within its geographical expanse that is undisputed. So, the Nigerian problem is two-fold; the geographical expanse and the name Nigeria itself. Both the geographical expanse and the name are an inheritance from the British colonial master. Thus, the geographical expanse of Nigeria was founded on the preferences of the master, and not on the reasoning of the human populations constituting the country. The late Beko Ransome-Kuti, the late Chukwuemeka Odumegwu Ojukwu, and General Abubakar A. Atofarati have commented on the incongruity of the peoples of Nigeria within the geography of Nigeria. In its geographical expanse lays the question of Nigeria as a geo-social reality. Nigeria is today continued in name, and by this fact we are introduced to the Nigerian ingestion of the Western worldview. If the Westerner designed Nigeria the way it had then the Westerner had superior reason to do so. If the Westerner gave a certain geographic construction the name Nigeria then the Westerner had superior justification for choosing the name, never mind that the name was invented. The West as the Superior is so ingrained in...
